Stacey K. Borden

This book was written for children who have experienced addiction through their parents and continued efforts in battling their addiction, having the ability to know that change is possible and they will see the world in their future with a different set of eyes with hopes they can live a happier, healthier life. In families where alcohol or other drugs are being abused, behavior is frequently unpredictable and communication is unclear. family life is characterized by chaos and unpredictability. This book is described by a young boy who tells the story of his family and the events that lead up to his fathers triumph to recovery. The author Stacey Borden is in long term recovery. Stacey wrote this book as a school project with hopes to get published and distributed to schools and treatment centers through-out the United States so that children may be able to relate, heal and not feel so alone. Edited by Mr. James Marshall of Boston, MA. James is a recovering person and as a result of his personal experience and his professional training has decided to devote his life work towards recovery, transformation and healing to those still suffering from the disease of addiction. Mr. Marshall is currently a student majoring in Human Services. All proceeds will go to New Beginnings Reentry Services, Inc. A non-profit organization for the purpose of working in partnership with community agencies to advance and empower women returning as citizen's who are transitioning from traumas, addiction and imprisonment to become productive participants in their communities.
