The focus of Letters of War is letters written by Marines and Corpsmen in what was probably the last sustained trench warfare that will ever be seen. In addition, it includes articles and documents from the era of the Korean War, from both the enemy and United Nations sides, that give a historical view of the events that shaped the war. Also included are stories of actual combat on the front lines at the Marine company level, especially recounting the "Battle of the Nevada Cities." A saga of the life of a young Corpsman gives the reader an understanding of how a man becomes a Navy Corpsman and his insertion into the chaos of war and the courage he developed. It gives the convoluted and narrow picture from the eyes of a combatant to a broader, historical picture of the war.
